Published regularly on TUESDAYS, THURS-DAYS and SATURDAYS, at FIVE DOLLARS PER ANNUM, payable in advance.

ANECDOTES OF IRVING AND DICKENS. Harper's Magazine for December contains an anecdote of Washington Irving, showing that he was bitterly prejudiced against Chas. Dickens. Mr. Field, we believe it is, writing of dining with Irving at Madrid, says:

"The name of Dickens happened to be introduced, and he became very heated in telling me about his relations with that author. Finally he could no longer contain himself, and jumping from his seat, he walked up and down the floor in great apparent agitation. He told me that he had corresponded with Dickens long before they ever met. That both from his writings and his letters he had formed the highest conception of his personal character. That under these circumstances Dickens arrived at New York, and he (Irving) called upon him at the Astor House. That immediately after sending in his card he was invited to Mr. Dickens' parlor, and, as he entered the room, that gentleman met him, napkin in hand. He had been dining, and the table was covered with a vulgar profusion of food, and the table-cioth was covered with gravy and wine. Wring-ing his hand, Dickens' first salutation was 'Irving, I am delighted to see you. What will you drink, a mint-julep or a gin-cocktail?" idea of inviting me to drink juleps and cocktails' naively exclaimed Mr. Irving. He found Dickens outrageously vulgar—in dress, manners and mind. And none of the young people were more incensed against him for his American Notes and Martin Chuzzlewit than was the gentle Goldsmith of American literature. There is a further association between Dick-

"What a comic scene that was between himself and Dickens at Baroum's hotel in Baltimore, in 1842, when they were enjoying one of John Guy's huge mint-juleps upon which Dickens indicted the little note still hanging up in the dining-room of Guy's in Philadelphia, and so well introduced on pages 143, 144 and 145 of Dr. Mackenzie's Life of Dickens, from which ens and Irving, in respect to mint juleps, that is interesting in this connection. We quote from Colonel Forney's Anecdotes of Public

Men, New Series, No. 20:

"Trying met him at Baltimore. In a letter
(Washington, fifth of February, 1868) Mr. Dickens thus mentions the fact to Mr. Lauman: 'Your reference to my dear friend Washington Irving renews the vivid impression reawakened in my mind at Baltimore but the other day. Saw his fine face for the last time in that city. He came here from New York to pass a day or two with me before I went westward, and they were made among the most memorable of my life by his delightful fancy and genial humor. Some unknown admirer of his books and mine sent to the hotel a most enormous mint julep wreathed with flowers. We sat one on eitherside of it, with great solempity, (it filled a respectable sized round table) but the solemnity was of every short duration. It was quite an enchanted julep, and carried us among innumerable people and places that we both knew. The julep held out lar into the night, and my memory never saw him afterward, otherwise than as bending over it with a straw with an attempted air of gravity (after some anecdote involving some wonderfully droll and delicate observation of character) and then, as his eye caught mine, melting into that capivating laugh of his, which was the brightest and best I have ever heard.'

"The unchanged julep was a gift from the proprietor of Guy's hotel, Baltimore, and having held out far into the night, must have been ou a magnificent scale at first-large enough for Gog and Magog, were they alive, to have become mellow upon. George Cruikshauk or H. L. Stephens-no inferior artist should dare to attempt it-might win additional fame by sketching the two authors, so much akin in genius and geniality, imbibing the generous, melifluous fluid from a pitcher which, like the magic purse of Fortunatus, seemed always

"Dickens-who could doubt it-would have doubly enjoyed the nectarious julep had he known that, in the Masque of Comus, by John Milton, a good receipt for making it was given more than two centuries back. The hero, son or Bacchus, is first described as Offering to every weary traveller

His orient liquor in crystal glass, To quench the drouth of Phæbus.

And then offers it to the lady; thus addressing her : And first behold this cordial julep here.

That flames and dances in his crystial bounds, With spirits of balm and fragrant syrups mixed:

No! that Nepenthe, which the wife of Thone In Egypt gave to Jove-born Helena, Is of such power to stir up joy as this, To life so friendly or so cool to thirst.

"The identical name 'julep' is mentioned then the ingredients-the balm or mint, which gives the flavor; the spirits; the fragrant syrup,' so palpably denoting the saccharine element; mixed up in, and imbibed from, a 'crystal glass;' and, to crown all, the unmistakble addition of ice, which makes the mixture not only 'to life so friendly,' but so cool to thirst' that it would actually 'quench the drough of Phœbus.' However, Milton's tastes may have deteriorated in old age, when he had fallen upon evil days, his early propensities were evidently genial, if not hilarious. At the age of twenty-three, when he wrote the exquisite poem of L'Allegro he exclaimed :

'Haste thee, nympths, and bring with thee Jest and youthful jollity."

"Even in Paradise Lost, which is a serious poem, Milton was unable to refrain from an constantly on hand at the Factory. Call and ahusion to mixed liquors, for he mentioned, in examine stock and prices. the most express terms, being 'bound for the Port of Negus.' "Mr. Dickens aeknowledged the receipt of the julep in the following letter, which is care-tully and proudly preserved at Guy's, South Seventh street. Philadelphia:

BARNUM'S HOTEL, March 23, 1842. "My DEAR SIR-I am truely obliged to pou for the beautiful and delicious mint julep you have so kindly sent me. It's quite a mercy that I knew what it was. I have tasted it, but await further proceedings until the arrival of Washington Irving, whom I expect to dine with me, tete-a-tete, and who will help me drink your health. With many thanks to you, Steam Cracker & Cake Bakers, dear sir, faithfully yours,
